Topic: Distress Tolerance: Change and Acceptance

Presenters: Caroline Hodgson, PhD

Description: Dysregulated teenagers are often in desperate need of change to interrupt cycles of self-destructive behaviors, including self-harm, substance abuse, and suicidal behavior. However, many of these same teenagers resist these interventions and struggle to tolerate feedback from caregivers hoping to promote this change. This presentation will incorporate lessons and principles from dialectical behavior therapy (DBT) to promote the fine balance between accepting and validating patients while facilitating necessary behavior changes. Participants will learn specific distress tolerance skills to support their patients in accepting stressors they cannot change and building their capacity to safely outlast negative emotional experiences. Participants will have opportunities to practice these skills through case vignettes and role play exercises.
